JOURNALISM EDUCATION ORGANIZATIONS

More than 1,000 educators in institutions of higher learning are members of the Association for Education in Journalism (AEJ). The AEJ also is comprised of about 200 graduate students and several affiliated professional organizations, including the American Association of Schools and Departments of Journalism (AASDJ) and the American Society of Journalism School Administrators (ASJSA).

The AEJ, AASDJ and ASJSA are members of the American Council on Education in Journalism (ACEJ), an agency accrediting programs for professional education in journalism. When invited the ACEJ sends a team to evaluate an intitution's journalism sequences. The AASDJ, which represents schools and departments with accredited sequences, cooperates with media practitioners in raising educational standards. An objective of ASJSA is helping schools and departments work toward accreditation. The ASJSA founded the Journalism Educator in 1945.

Today, the Journalism Educator, Journalism Quarterly, Journalism Monographs, and Journalism Abstracts are published by AEJ.

JUNIOR COLLEGE JOURNALISM ASSOCIATION

The JCJA is an affiliate of the Association for Education in Journalism. Need for a national organization to meet problems of junior college journalism in the United States prompted the forming of the JCJA in 1968.

Recognition was partially gained for junior college journalism when the AEJ started accepting junior college journalism teachers as regular members and, shortly afterwards, recognized the JCJA as a full-fledged affiliate.

OFFICERS: President, Lillian A. Lodge, Miami-Dade Junior College, North Miami, Fla.; president-elect, G. Thomas Kramer, Los Angeles Pierce College, Los Angeles, Calif.; immediate past-president, Edgar E. Eaton, Green River Community College, Auburn, Wash., currently on special educational leave with the School of Journalism, Southern Illinois University; and executive secretary, Fred Walker Jr., Vincennes University, Vincennes, Ind.

The JCJA is the official organization for journalism educators in junior and community colleges. Members represent colleges in all the states and Canada.
